The University of Manchester

Staff Survey 2019

Background

In March 2019, The University of Manchester launched its staff survey, to provide an opportunity for employees to feedback on their experiences in working for the University and to highlight issues they feel should be addressed in the future.

The survey was designed by The University of Manchester (in conjunction with Capita Surveys and Research) as an online survey, with an option to complete the survey on paper or over the telephone.

The survey was distributed on 4th March 2019 with a closure date of 8th April 2019. Capita Surveys and Research processed and validated 7,424 completed survey questionnaires from The University of Manchester employees: this gives a response rate of 69% based on the 10,814 staff invited to participate.

In addition, UMC staff received invitations to participate in the staff survey. UMC achieved 167 responses from 474 members of staff invited, equivalent to a 35% response rate. The results are reported separately from this report.

Presentation of results

This report presents a summary of the results for the whole University i.e. everyone in The University of Manchester who participated in the survey.

Part A. Executive Summary

A summary of some of the key findings from the survey results.

Part B. Participation

Survey response rates for The University of Manchester.

Part C. Employee Engagement and Organisation Climate

Key employee engagement and organisation climate indicators and comparisons with other Higher Education Institutions (HEIs).

Part D. Ranking questions – most positive question perceptions

The most positive perceptions from the 2019 survey (i.e. those questions with a 'combined positive' response percentage of 75% or more) in ranked order which can be identified as areas of strength.

Part E. Ranking questions – least positive question perceptions

The least positive perceptions from the 2019 survey (i.e. those questions with a 'combined positive' response percentage of 50% or less) in ranked order which can be identified as areas for improvement.

Part F. Statistically significant differences in perceptions since 2017

A summary of the statistically significant differences in the question results between the 2019 and the 2017 staff surveys in chart format (ordered from most to least positive percentage point change and colour coded to highlight whether the change is a statistically significant difference).

Part G. Areas of strength and areas identified for improvement

All positive perceptions for the primary questions/statements in the 2019 survey, firstly in descending ranked order and also in questionnaire order by each section of the survey. All results are colour coded to help to identify areas of strength or opportunities for improvement.

Part H. Survey Results

A presentation of the survey results in chart format in questionnaire order. Each section displays questions in appropriate groups in chart format with percentages. It should be noted the sum of the total responses throughout this report may not be exactly equal to 100% due to rounding.

Reliability of results

The accuracy of survey results is related to the size of the responding sample, not the whole organisation from which it is drawn. Very low response rates run the risk of non-response bias, e.g. if only 30% of an organisation participate can you be sure that the views of the 30% who responded are the same as the 70% who didn't respond? As a rule of thumb a sample size of 200 responses or a 50% response rate is considered the minimum for opinion research whatever the organisation size, and will overcome non-response bias. When considering a sub-group of a total survey population 50 responses or a 50% response rate is considered the minimum for results to be reliable.

Confidence intervals and statistical reliability

The respondents to the questionnaire are only a sample of the total University population, so we cannot be 100% certain that the figures obtained are exactly those we would have if everybody had returned their questionnaires, i.e. the 'true values'. We can, however, predict the variation between the sample results and the 'true' values from the knowledge of the size of the samples on which the results are based, the 'confidence level'.

In social research, the most common measure of confidence for this prediction is the 95% confidence interval – where the chances are 95 out of 100 that the true value would be within a specified range – i.e. if everyone had responded. As a general guide it is calculated that the results for The University of Manchester are within $\pm 1\%$ (the confidence interval), for each question. The confidence interval guide for 2017 is $\pm 1\%$. This means when considering improvements and deteriorations between the years there would need to be a change of at least three percentage points in response for most questions.

Understanding the effect of rounding

Figures throughout this report are displayed as whole numbers for the ease of reading. To ensure the figures are as accurate as possible we apply rounding to the figures to the nearest percentage point. Sometimes this will mean that the figures shown may not be identical if calculations are performed using the figures displayed in the report, however any difference would not be larger than ± 1 percentage point.

Therefore, if you sum the percentages for all the response options to a question the figure may not sum to 100%, but may sum to 99% or 101%.

When combining the total positive responses we first combine the number of responses and then calculate a combined percentage, rather than simply adding the two individual response percentages together.

In the example shown below, if we sum the displayed percentages for agree and tend to agree to calculate the percentage positive response it would be 91%, however, by using raw figures we calculate the result more accurately to 91.5289% which is rounded up to 92%.

EXAMPLE:

	Agree	Tend to Agree	Tend to Disagree	Disagree	Total	Total Positive responses calculation
	(A)	(B)	(C)	(D)	A+B+C+D	A+B
Number of responses	4289	2464	448	177	7,378	6,753
Percent of responses	58.1323%	33.3966%	6.0721%	2.3990%	100.0000%	91.5289% (this rounds up to 92%)
Rounds to	58%	33%	6%	2%	99%	91%

Note

When calculating the percentage point differences between the 2017 and 2019 survey results, the whole numbers for each of the years, following the rounding of the raw figures, are used.

Part A. Executive Summary

The University of Manchester achieved a response rate of 69% (compared to previous rates of 72% in 2017, 70% in 2015 and 71% in 2013). The 2019 response rate is above the mean average response rate of 68% achieved by other higher education institutions (HEIs) surveyed by Capita in 2018 and 2019.

A response rate of 69% means the University has a robust set of results on which to make decisions and shows a high level of staff engagement.

The University aims to be an Employer of Choice that 'attracts the very best staff from across the world, with a culturally diverse workforce of which more than 80% express satisfaction with the University'.

Employer of Choice benchmarking

The 2019 survey results continue to show many positive headline results and the University's strengths contribute to a high level of staff engagement measured in the question 'The University is a good place to work'. Some 92% of The University of Manchester employees agreeing it is, and this percentage is higher than the current benchmark median of 89% for Capita HEI clients (based on the 38 other HEIs surveyed by Surveys and Research in the last two years). The University achieved 93% agreement in 2017 which was higher the benchmark of 88% in 2017.

Capita Surveys and Research's Employer of Choice benchmarking uses a question 'score' as a more accurate measure than a cumulative percentage (i.e. combining 'Agree and Tend to Agree' percentages) and allows organisations to be ranked in their benchmark group. A question score takes into account the strength of the response as well as the number of employees responding to the question. The maximum score an organisation can achieve is 4.00, but an organisation achieving 3.00 or more is considered an Employer of Choice and generally indicates more than 75% of employees have a positive view of the organisation as a good place to work.

The Employer of Choice question score for The University of Manchester being a good place to work in 2019 is 3.47 which is lower than the 3.53 achieved by the University in 2017 but higher than the current median benchmark score of 3.36 for HEIs. In 2017, The University of Manchester ranked 3rd out of 49 HEIs with a score of 3.53. The University is currently ranked 7th out of 39 HEIs surveyed by Capita in the last two years. The best HEI score is currently 3.76 and the lowest score is 2.95.

Employee Engagement Measures

The survey included 17 employee engagement and organisation climate measures which are benchmarked against the Capita HEI benchmark group. The benchmarking shows that University staff perceptions are statistically significantly better than the benchmark for nine of these measures (there were ten in 2017); five of these are not considered statistically significantly different (six in 2017) and three show results which are statistically significantly worse than the benchmark (two in 2017)*.

The questions scoring worse than the benchmark scores concern staff having had an individual performance and development review or probation review in the last 12 months, staff saying their immediate line manager helps them find a good work-life balance, and staff saying that more could be done to help staff prepare and cope with change.

Of the 17 questions, ten of the 2019 question results have deteriorated when compared to the 2017 results, four have improved and three have the same percentage in 2019 as in the 2017 survey.

Please note there were 18 questions used as employee engagement measures in 2017.*

Overall comparisons between 2017 and 2019

When considering changes between the 2019 and the survey in 2017, the 2019 results for the whole of the University indicate there are six statistically significant improvements and 19 deteriorations, whilst 38 questions showed no changes or changes not considered to be statistically significant.

The most improved staff perceptions relate to staff taking part in any type of work-related learning or development; staff completing personal development objectives; staff awareness of their responsibilities and of zero tolerance to bullying and harassment campaigns; awareness of the University's Dignity at Work and Study Policy; and awareness of University wellbeing support services.

The deteriorating perceptions relate mostly to job security; the Senior Leadership Team; change management; and communication across the whole University.

Summary of key issues from the 2019 survey

There were 92 questions in the survey (excluding comments, most sub-questions and questions about the profile of respondents) and analysis of these questions shows 49 questions were answered positively by 75% or more respondents, while 11 were answered negatively by 50% or more respondents.

Some of the known key measures and drivers of employee engagement and job satisfaction in an organisation are also key strengths within The University of Manchester. These include staff feeling physically safe and secure in their area of work at the University; staff thinking the University is a good place to work and feeling proud to work for it; staff willingness to recommend the University as a place to work and to study; staff satisfaction with immediate manager support; and staff feeling part of the University.

When considering the positive/negative perceptions in this report, it is important to note that those provided in this summary relate to the University overall, and it is not unusual to find that specific areas and staff groups have differing perceptions to the University as a whole, which might require a more localised approach to action planning.

It is also important to note that whilst there is a high percentage of employees who identify themselves as not being harassed, bullied or discriminated against, and this is identified as a strength in the analysis, these areas should be considered as areas for improvement as most organisations have a zero tolerance policy regarding these issues.

The University of Manchester can use the information from the staff survey to manage the future of the University by identifying areas of good practice and building upon what is done well, as well as improving in some areas identified by the results. The survey results indicate The University of Manchester should focus on the following, which revealed the least positive employee perceptions from the survey for the University as a whole:

- Managing stress levels of staff
- Change management
- Staff workload
- Involving staff in discussing staff survey results and allow them to contribute to action planning.

Development in these areas would further improve employee engagement, job satisfaction and ultimately the morale, motivation, health and wellbeing of employees, enabling them to continue to provide a good quality of service to students and service users.

Part B. Participation

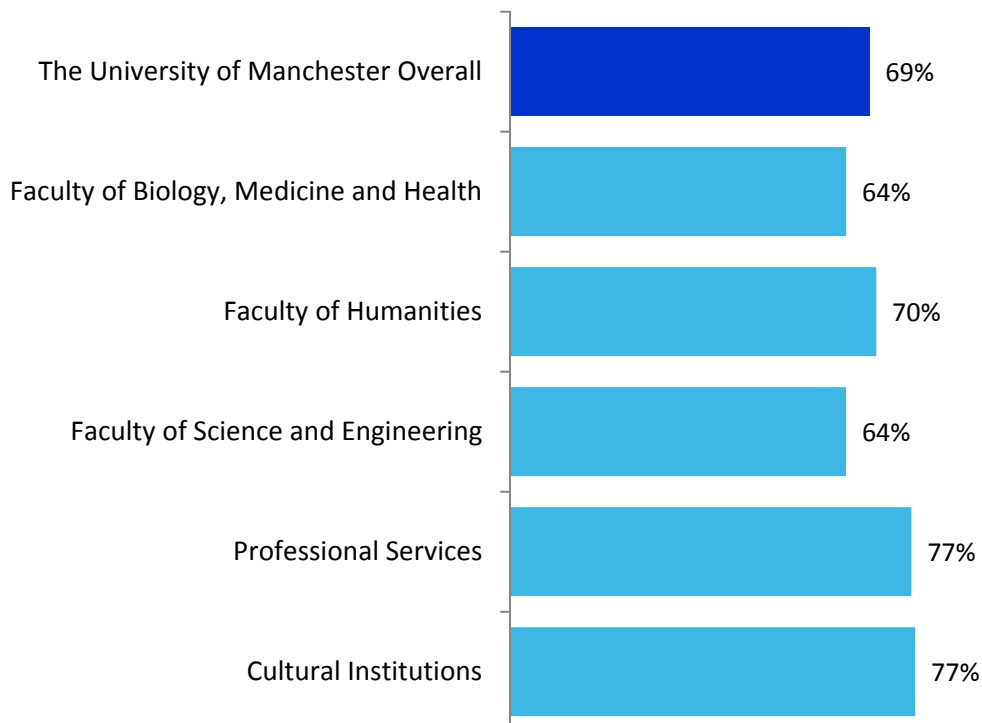

The following chart shows the response rate for all staff who responded to The University of Manchester staff survey.

A total of 7,424 survey questionnaires were completed and returned by the 10,814 members of staff invited to participate in the survey: this means that the overall response rate for The University of Manchester is 69%.

The response rates by Faculty / Professional Services / Cultural Institutions ranged between 64% and 77%.

Part C. Employee Engagement and Organisation Climate

The following tables compare some of the key results from the survey for The University of Manchester in relation to the other Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) that Capita supported to undertake a staff survey in the last two years.

The tables on the following pages show the key questions included in the survey which measure employee engagement, i.e. 'motivated and involved employees, who are supporters of the University' and organisation climate i.e. 'how things are in the work environment'. Positive responses to these questions demonstrate high levels of employee job satisfaction which leads to the University providing a good quality service to students and other service users.

Making comparisons with other HEIs helps put the employee engagement results into context and highlights the University's strengths and areas for improvement. However, the comparisons are not used on their own to decide the issues for improvement within the University. The negative perceptions from staff responding to the survey may not be the same as those identified by the HEI comparisons, but should also be considered as areas for improvement.

The employee engagement and organisation climate tables

The yellow tables on the following pages show the 'agree' percentages ('agree'/'tend to agree'/'yes' responses) for The University of Manchester compared to the median result of other HEIs. The information in the penultimate column of the tables indicates whether the University result is statistically significantly different when compared to other HEIs. Statistical significance does not necessarily mean it is an important difference. What it does indicate is where a real difference exists between the University result and the median HEI result, and the difference is not just by chance related to some other factor such as the response rate, or the size of the organisation etc.

For ease of reference the statistically significant differences are shown in green where the difference is a better result than the median for the benchmark group, and in red where the difference is worse than median.

The final column of the tables indicates whether the 2019 University percentage is an improvement (↑ or ↓), a deterioration (↓ or ↑) or the same (←) as the 2017 agree percentage. The percentage point difference between the years is provided in brackets for reference.

Statistically significant differences

There may be instances throughout the results tables where, for example, a 2% difference for one question is shown to be significant, but a 3% difference for another question is not. The most likely reason for this relates to the fact that, while all percentages and differences are reported to the nearest whole number, all statistical testing is performed on unrounded results.

The statistical significance calculations are also affected by the number of people who provided a valid answer to each question. In this case, you may find that some apparently 'large' percentage changes/differences are not considered statistically significantly different.

Statistical significance may also be affected if the result approaches the extremes (e.g. the percentage of positive responses is >90% or <10%). So to calculate the statistically significant differences we use the Wilson Score Interval, as we consider it a robust test at the extremes. This approach is equivalent to constructing a 95% confidence interval for the differences between the results; if the confidence interval does not contain 0, then the result is statistically significant at the 5% level.

Part D. Ranking questions – the most positive question perceptions

This part of the report provides the most positive perceptions for The University of Manchester as a whole (ordered from most to least positive), which can be identified as areas of strength. Percentage point changes from the 2017 survey results are shown for reference where comparisons are available.

Questions or statements with a combined positive result ('Agree/Tend to Agree' or 'Yes' responses) of 75% or above are considered areas of strength. The University of Manchester achieved 49 areas of strength in 2019.

Calculating the 'combined positive' perceptions

Those questions which have a 'combined positive' result of 75% or more can be considered as areas of strength. The result for each question is calculated by adding together the 'Agree' and 'Tend to Agree' responses and using the resulting combined percentage or using the straightforward 'Yes' responses to questions.

However, to calculate a 'combined positive' result for some questions the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses are combined to generate the percentage, or the straightforward 'No' response is used.

For example, to find the 'combined positive' result for the question 'Relationships at work are strained' we add together the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses as these are the respondents who have said 'Relationships at work are not strained'.

A second example, the 'positive' response in relation to the question 'Do you believe you are currently being harassed or bullied at work?' is the 'No' response, i.e. those respondents who have said 'I am not currently being harassed or bullied at work'.

When ranking and comparing results for questions throughout the survey we will always use the 'combined positive' and show the relevant associated question text as shown in the examples above.

Notes

Please note, whilst there may be a high percentage of employees who identify themselves as not being harassed, bullied or discriminated against, and this is identified as a strength in the analysis, these areas should be considered as areas for improvement as most organisations have a zero tolerance policy regarding these issues.

Sub-set questions/statements are only asked of participants meeting certain criteria (usually giving specific response(s) to a previous question) and therefore are answered by a smaller number of participants. To ensure anonymity is maintained, some of the sub-set questions/statements are excluded from this analysis. However, as a large proportion of employees have responded to the sub-set questions in Question Block 6: Performance and Personal Development (Q6-2 to Q6-6), and Q8-10 'Has your stress had an impact on your ability to cope with the work demands placed on you?' these follow up sub-set questions are used in the analysis.

 % of positive responses

Part E. Ranking questions – the least positive question perceptions

This part of the report provides the least positive perceptions for The University of Manchester, which can be considered areas for improvement. The percentage point changes from the 2017 survey results are shown for reference where comparisons are available.

Questions or statements with a combined positive result ('Agree/Tend to Agree' or 'Yes' responses) of 50% or lower are considered areas for improvement. The University of Manchester recorded 11 areas for improvement in 2019.

Calculating the 'least positive' perceptions

Those questions which have a 'combined positive' result of 50% or less can be considered as areas for improvement. The result for each question is calculated by adding together the 'Agree' and 'Tend to Agree' responses and using the resulting combined percentage or using the straightforward 'Yes' responses to questions.

However, to calculate a 'combined positive' result for some questions the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses are combined to generate the percentage, or the straightforward 'No' response is used.

For example, to find the 'combined positive' result for the question 'Relationships at work are strained' we add together the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses as these are the respondents who have said 'Relationships at work are not strained'.

A second example, the 'positive' response in relation to the question 'Do you believe you are currently being harassed or bullied at work?' is the 'No' response, i.e. those respondents who have said 'I am not currently being harassed or bullied at work'.

When ranking and comparing results for questions throughout the survey we will always use the 'combined positive' and show the relevant associated question text as shown in the examples above.

Notes

Sub-set questions/statements are only asked of participants meeting certain criteria (usually giving specific response(s) to a previous question) and therefore are answered by a smaller number of participants. To ensure anonymity is maintained, some of the sub-set questions/statements are excluded from this analysis. However, as a large proportion of employees have responded to the sub-set questions in Question Block 6: Performance and Personal Development (Q6-2 to Q6-6), and Q8-10 'Has your stress had an impact on your ability to cope with the work demands placed on you?' these follow up sub-set questions are used in the analysis.

The least positive perceptions (with a combined positive percentage of 50% or less)

Part F. Statistically significant differences in perceptions since 2017

This part of the report displays in chart format the percentage point change in positive responses, for The University of Manchester between 2019 and 2017 where a comparison is available.

The results are ordered from most to least positive percentage point change and colour coded to show statistical significance. This analysis only shows questions that have a change in percentage points, questions that have a zero percentage point change are not shown.

Overall, the 2019 results for the whole of The University of Manchester indicate there are six statistically significant improvements in the combined positive perceptions and 19 deteriorations, whilst 38 questions showed change not considered to be statistically significant.

When considering the changes between the years it is important to note that a simple change in the percentages between the years may be related to a difference in the number of respondents answering a question rather than a real change between the years. We therefore undertake an additional 'test' to identify statistically significant differences i.e. 'real' differences between the years using a confidence interval. As a general guide the confidence interval for The University of Manchester results are within $\pm 1\%$ for each question in 2019. The confidence interval guide for 2017 is $\pm 1\%$. This means when considering improvements and deteriorations between the years there would need to be a change of at least three percentage points in response for most questions.

Calculating the 'combined positive' perceptions

Those questions which have a 'combined positive' result of 75% or more can be considered as areas of strength. The result for each question is calculated by adding together the 'Agree' and 'Tend to Agree' responses and using the resulting combined percentage or using the straightforward 'Yes' responses to questions.

However, to calculate a 'combined positive' result for some questions the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses are combined to generate the percentage, or the straightforward 'No' response is used.

For example, to find the 'combined positive' result for the question 'Relationships at work are strained' we add together the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses as these are the respondents who have said 'Relationships at work are not strained'.

A second example, the 'positive' response in relation to the question 'Do you believe you are currently being harassed or bullied at work?' is the 'No' response, i.e. those respondents who have said 'I am not currently being harassed or bullied at work'.

When ranking and comparing results for questions throughout the survey we will always use the 'combined positive' and show the relevant associated question text as shown in the examples above.

Notes

Sub-set questions/statements are only asked of participants meeting certain criteria (usually giving specific response(s) to a previous question) and therefore are answered by a smaller number of participants. To ensure anonymity is maintained, some of the sub-set questions/statements are excluded from this analysis. However, as a large proportion of employees have responded to the sub-set questions in Question Block 6: Performance and Personal Development (Q6-2 to Q6-6), and Q8-10 'Has your stress had an impact on your ability to cope with the work demands placed on you?' these follow up sub-set questions are used in the analysis.

Part G. Areas of strength and areas identified for improvement

This part of the report displays all the primary questions in the survey in table format for The University of Manchester. The table contains the 2019 percentage; the 2017 percentage; and the percentage point change between the two years where a comparison is available. A summary table of the overall number of improvements and deteriorations between the 2019 and 2017 survey results is shown on the top of each page.

The first table presents results in ranked in descending order i.e. the most positive responses appear at the top of the list. The second table presents results within survey sections in questionnaire order.

The question/statement results are colour coded to help to identify areas of strength or opportunities for improvement, using boundaries agreed by Capita Surveys and Research user groups to offer guidance and focus for action planning.

Cells displaying question results are colour coded red, amber or green according to the percentage of respondents giving a positive response:

GREEN	indicates 'strength' - agreement from 75% or more of staff
AMBER	indicates 'opportunities for improvement' - agreement from between 51% and 74% of staff
RED	indicates 'areas for improvement' - agreement from 50% or fewer staff.

Summary of colour coding for The University of Manchester 2019 Staff Survey:

Strengths:	49
Opportunities for improvement:	32
Need for improvement:	11

Calculating the 'combined positive' perceptions

Those questions which have a 'combined positive' result of 75% or more can be considered as areas of strength. The result for each question is calculated by adding together the 'Agree' and 'Tend to Agree' responses and using the resulting combined percentage or using the straightforward 'Yes' responses to questions.

However, to calculate a 'combined positive' result for some questions the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses are combined to generate the percentage, or the straightforward 'No' response is used.

For example, to find the 'combined positive' result for the question 'Relationships at work are strained' we add together the 'Disagree' and 'Tend to Disagree' responses as these are the respondents who have said 'Relationships at work are not strained'.

A second example, the 'positive' response in relation to the question 'Do you believe you are currently being harassed or bullied at work?' is the 'No' response, i.e. those respondents who have said 'I am not currently being harassed or bullied at work'.

When ranking and comparing results for questions throughout the survey we will always use the 'combined positive' and show the relevant associated question text as shown in the examples above.

Notes

Please note, whilst there may be a high percentage of employees who identify themselves as not being harassed, bullied or discriminated against, and this is identified as a strength in the analysis, these areas should be considered as areas for improvement as most organisations have a zero tolerance policy regarding these issues.

Sub-set questions/statements are only asked of participants meeting certain criteria (usually giving specific response(s) to a previous question) and therefore are answered by a smaller number of participants. To ensure anonymity is maintained, some of the sub-set questions/statements are excluded from this analysis. However, as a large proportion of employees have responded to the sub-set questions in Question Block 6: Performance and Personal Development (Q6-2 to Q6-6), and Q8-10 'Has your stress had an impact on your ability to cope with the work demands placed on you?' these follow up sub-set questions are used in the analysis.

The table below shows the percentage of respondents who gave a positive response to the question.

Responses to negatively phrased questions (highlighted in grey) have been treated in reverse to allow direct comparison with positively worded questions / statements. e.g. Q8-7 Relationships at work are not strained, the percentage stated represents the respondents who said 'Tend to Disagree' and 'Disagree' to the question Q8-7 Relationships at work are strained (i.e. gave the positive response).

There may be variation up to 1% when compared to the Frequency Data report due to rounding.

Part H. Survey Results

This part of the report is a presentation of the survey results in chart format in the same order as the questionnaire for ease of reference.

All the main results charts (for scale response questions) are structured in a similar way:

1. Question: The text of the question that was asked.
2. Response chart: The percentage of respondents who selected each response option for each question, rounded to the nearest whole percentage, is presented in a stacked bar chart. It is important to look at this detailed breakdown, not just the percentage of positive responses, when interpreting the survey results. Note that the rounding of percentages occasionally results in the total percentage not adding up to exactly 100%.
3. Total Responses: The number of valid responses that were received for the question.
4. Combining the positive responses and the 'rounding effect' (Positive %): The total combined percentage of 'good' or positive responses that were received for each question in 2019 is shown after the stacked bar chart.

The combined positive responses usually add together the 'Agree/Tend to agree' or 'Yes' responses. However, for some questions the positive response may be the 'Disagree/Tend to disagree' or 'No' responses, or 'Never' in the case of Q8-9. Questions that are considered neutral are not given a positive %.

The following colour coding is used on the bar charts to aid with analysis:

Green generally represents the positive or 'good' outcome.

Red generally represents the negative or 'poor' outcome.

Grey represents outcomes which are neither positive nor negative, such as those questions in the 'About Your Role' and 'About You' sections; 'Don't Know' responses (Question Block 2 to 4); 'Too Early To Say' responses (Q6-4 and Q6-5); and 'Not Sure' responses (Q10-7).

To ensure the figures are accurate, rounding to the nearest percentage point is applied at the last stage of the calculation. This may mean the total positive percentage displayed can be up to 1% different from simply adding together the two positive percentages. [A more detailed explanation of this and an example can be found in the section of this report under the heading 'Understanding the effect of rounding'].

5. Change from 2017: The change in the percentage of positive responses to this question since the 2017 staff survey. This data may be presented as a positive (+) or negative (-) percentage according to whether the overall percentage of positive responses was higher or lower than in 2017. Not all 2019 questions were in the 2017 questionnaire and so a comparison is not available for those questions.
