Head of School Update

Dear colleagues

I hope you found some space to think during reading week, and that you and the students have returned to teaching and learning activities with renewed enthusiasm.

As you will see below, we have already had some notable successes in research this semester. Congratulations to those who won grants, and also to those who have had key publications in print.

In teaching and learning colleagues across the School are working hard at improving our teaching and learning. As I indicated before we are also developing a new version of WAM model, with the primary aim of making it more transparent. I hope to have drafts of this for each department early in the New Year.

As you have will have seen, the well-known journalist and public intellectual Gary Younge will join the School as Professor of Sociology. Despite the sociology title, his appointment was made to increase the profile of the School. He will contribute to interdisciplinary teaching and research activities that cut across the School and to broader academic and public engagement activities. The quantity of high-profile and positive public responses to the announcement has been astounding.

One of the less positive things to report is that it has come to my attention that in very few and very small pockets of the School there are less than collegiate relationships between academic and PS staff. The histories of these relationships can be based in long or short-term perceived injustices or insensitive interactions. With colleagues I am addressing the current tensions, but I want to make it clear that the time has come to leave these histories and tensions behind. I expect all colleagues, be they academics or PS, senior or junior, to engage with each other in a respectful manner, and where this is not happening I will call people to account. Academics can help by being sensitive to the challenges that PS colleagues are currently experiencing with respect to the introduction of new systems, and importantly by meeting deadlines that PS staff are obliged to set. PS colleagues can help by being sensitive to the range of pressures that academic staff are under due to multiple demands on their time — teaching, research, administration and external commitments. I reiterate that this is not by any means a broad problem in the school, but limited to just a few small areas.

Brian Heaphy, Head of School of Social Sciences

TEACHING & LEARNING

After about three months in my role of Director of Teaching and Learning, I have now had the opportunity to meet all the Teaching and Learning Leads in our Departments and discussed with them their Student Experience Action Plans. It has been definitely invaluable and stimulating to see all the meaningful, innovative and exciting things that we do with and for our students. There is definitely plenty of good practice to share during our School Teaching and Learning Committee meetings.

Below you can find some updates on projects and schemes that involve teaching and learning.

Student Lifecycle Project and Student Experience Project

https://www.staffnet.manchester.ac.uk/news/display/?id=22282

The University is undertaking two ambitious and interrelated projects. You may have heard of the Student Lifecycle Project (SLP): a complete change in the business process and IT system of student administration. While the new IT system is being piloted, efforts are now concentrated on the Student Experience Project (SEP): a re-organisation of the Directorate of Student Experience and Faculties, including a new leadership model. Both projects are expected to affect gradually, but significantly the way we teach and support of our students.

One recent effect of the SEP is that School Directors of Teaching and Learning (like myself) are now supported by senior PS staff: Heads of Teaching, Learning and Student Experience. Jo Kaiserman has joined our School in this role during the summer. Jo and I strongly believe in the essential part that a healthy partnership between academic and PS staff has for student experience and we are actively looking for ways and opportunities to enhance this partnership in our School.

New Vice-President (Teaching, Learning and Students) and update on TEF

The University has a new Vice-President for Teaching, Learning and Students, Professor April McMahon. April, previously employed at The University of Kent, is a linguist and has served as Chair of the TEF Subject Pilot Humanities Panel and member of the Subject Pilot Main Panel.

We do not have yet an official update on TEF in terms of timeline and subject-level submissions. During the last Humanities Teaching and Learning Committee, April stressed the fact that student engagement will be a key part of the process. We will continue in SoSS to identify effective ways to engage with students and shall be prepared to bring them to the TEF process, if and when required.

The University of Manchester Institute of Teaching and Learning

The University has created the Institute of Teaching and Learning (UMITL), led by Professor Judy Williams. The Institute will support the University's strategic aim to deliver teaching excellence by working closely with the emerging Faculty Teaching and Learning Academies, including our Humanities Teaching, Learning and Assessment Academy. Note that an interesting scheme that the Institute is launching in semester 2 is 'Leaders in Teaching' Programme 2019/20. DEADLINE FOR APPLICATIONS: Monday 02 December 2019, 9pm

Contact

I am always happy to talk to colleagues. If you would like to discuss your teaching with me, or just say "hi", my office is in Arthur Lewis, room 3.064.

Mario Pezzino, Director of Teaching and Learning, SoSS.

REF Preparations/RRE Interim and Rolling Reviews

REF preparations/RRE interim and rolling reviews:

Thank you to all colleagues who nominated new work for RRE review in the recent interim review period. Thanks too to colleagues who are involved with the grading process.

In the run up to REF, your UoAs will now move to a monthly rolling review process. There will be the further formal annual RRE review process starting in January 2020.

To assist in this process, we are asking all REF-eligible colleagues to ensure that they upload publications to their PURE profile as soon as they are accepted. Outputs can be uploaded and nominated at any time.

Please note that you must propose any articles you think are of REF quality (i.e. 3* or above, in your view) through the system so that they can be reviewed and graded.

If you have any queries, please contact Gillian Whitworth (Gillian.whitworth@manchester.ac.uk).

And while you are on PURE, please update your other profiles too, to showcase our vibrant research environment.

SCHOOL OPERATIONS NEWS

Head of School Operations, Alison Wilson

SoSS Email Policy

Just to remind everyone of the SoSS email policy:

The School encourages very limited, or no, operational, administrative and/or policy related emails at weekends, or before 8am and after 5pm on Monday-Friday. If you are sent emails outside these hours by colleagues or students, you are not under any obligation to respond out of working hours. If you do compose emails outside working hours to send to colleagues or students, please consider saving them as drafts and then sending them at the start of the next working day if you are using an email program that allows you to do so easily.

Student Experience Programme (SEP)

The Student Experience Programme is a major change initiative for The University, which brings together several inter-related University change projects under a single Programme of work.

The Programme is introducing new technology and processes to improve services for our students, staff and our organisation. In tandem, it will also create a revised staffing model through people and structural change, making us more flexible to respond to changing demands.

Technology and Processes

The services we provide are evolving, as are the expectations of students when they arrive here at Manchester. The 'on demand' nature of many services today – be it TV and film, banking, or shopping – bring a culture of self-service and instant access for all of us. Just as these services have evolved in response to customer demand, our educational services and means of resourcing those need to do the same.

The Student Experience Programme's technology and process strand is about transforming our services for students by introducing improved processes supported by new and upgraded technology.

Processes will be more efficient and consistent right from first enquiry through to graduation. For example, we're taking our old, paper-based processes and creating new standardised self-services so that students can manage their activities anywhere, on any device.

The first piece of new functionality was released on Monday 1 July 2019, seeing Microsoft Dynamics CRM come into use for a limited number of marketing and recruitment colleagues.

To be delivered:

an improved student records system (Campus Solutions 9.2) improved and simplified administrative processes new features and services in My Manchester additional functionality within Microsoft Dynamics CRM This work was previously known as the Student Lifecycle Project.

People and Structures

The people and structures strand of the Student Experience Programme will deliver organisational change in the Schools, Faculties and Directorate for the Student Experience, so that the benefits of the new processes and technology can be fully utilised.

The people and structural change will be delivered 'thematically' - grouping and examining roles within functional areas, such as Applications and Admissions. This approach ensures that the right structures in place for colleagues to work together as teams, based on their primary activity and in-keeping with the phased releases of new processes and technology.

As a result of this work, roles will change and PS colleagues will be going through major change over several years. Academic colleagues will have an opportunity to feed into the process.
