Project Outline

Building on its pioneering work on environmental breakdown and its landmark Commission for Economic Justice, IPPR has launched a major new Environmental Justice Commission to help develop the ideas and policies to bring about rapid green transition that is fair and just.

IPPR's Environmental Justice Commission is chaired by Ed Miliband MP, Laura Sandys and Caroline Lucas MP. They are joined on the commission by a number of leading figures from business, academia, civil society, trade unions and youth and climate activism.

The work undertaken in this position for the Commission will look at recent changes and future challenges in climate, environment and energy policy. It will include analysis of data across themes such as the economy, society and the environment. The exact scope of the work will be determined closer to the time and the intern will be involved in those discussions.
