

Quick Guide: Teaching and Learning Resources

The University of Manchester
Institute of Teaching and Learning

You can find the resources you need to develop or re-develop your teaching practices for online, blended or flexible learning across the University.

The Institute of Teaching and Learning has collated a range of resources for the initial move online on the Teaching Remotely website.

For longer term teaching development, and in preparation for the 2020-2021, the Institute website is being updated regularly with advice and resources to support your teaching practice.

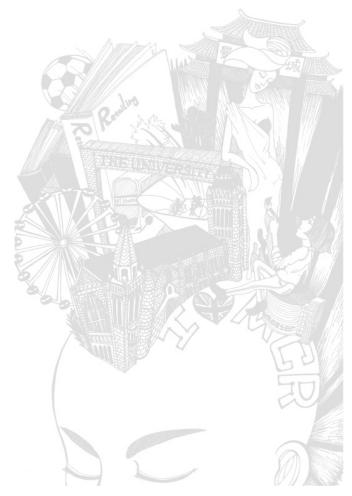

The Institute also facilitates a peer community for all teaching staff. Please join our Teaching and Learning Online Network (TALON) on Yammer.

The Library is developing approaches for integrated programme level support to ensure students have equitable access to its learning and specialist resources and expertise. They are also putting together updated guidance around copyright and

online

learning materials and to support delivery of teaching online.

Media Services provide support on the use of Zoom, and a range of guidance and training on media production techniques for teaching.

The University of Manchester
Institute of Teaching and Learning

The Faculty of Science and Engineering Teaching College and Academy has developed a range of resources, regularly updated including weekly videos, short courses and examples of blended learning design. Our Faculties have put together a range of useful resources that they recommend to colleagues locally. These may also be useful to colleagues in other parts of the University

There are some great sector resources available including: Taking your Teaching Online (Open University)

fcademy

FOR EDUCATION & professional DEVELOPMENT

The Faculty of Biology, Medicine and Health Sciences has a programme of training and support workshops available (for all levels of experience and knowledge) including:

- Programme bespoke workshops to support programme teams in reviewing, planning, designing overall programme level expectations of delivery, and interaction with learners
- Teaching/unit/module team workshops to support developing appropriate approaches for online delivery and assessment.

Additional help is available from BMH eLearning

The Faculty of Humanities has developed an excellent short course on Creating Online Resources for Blended Learning (open to all) extensive guidance for online learning and assessment including training for Spark and Voicethread and a Humanities specific online learning forum.