Some points to bear in mind

- If you think mitigating circumstances might affect your academic performance, you should tell your School as soon as possible. Mitigating circumstances applications must be submitted by published deadlines. Your School will advise you of these.
- The University defines mitigating circumstances as ‘unforeseeable or unpreventable circumstances that could have, or did have, a significant adverse effect on the academic performance of a student.’ This might include significant illness or injury, or the death of a close family member, for example.
- Events that were planned or could reasonably have been expected, such as holidays or moving house, will not normally be regarded as grounds for mitigation.
- A mitigating circumstances application will never lead to individual assessment marks being changed, as examiners can only give marks for the work presented to them. However, it might lead to you being given a replacement attempt at an assessment, or an assessment mark being discounted from the calculation of an overall course unit mark, for example.

Further guidance and frequently asked questions about mitigating circumstances during the Coronavirus outbreak, including examples of supporting evidence you can provide, can be found on the Student Support website.

Evidence

You should provide as much supporting evidence as possible, which should be independent and time-specific, relating to the circumstances you are claiming for. You should also comply with any additional requests made by your School.

Students registered with DASS for a disability will not usually need to provide further evidence of the disability itself but may need to provide evidence of issues exacerbating it, if applicable.

Please see the Student Support webpage on mitigating circumstances for more details on evidence.
