Your Room Number Explained

In most halls of residence, room numbers follow the same format of floor.flat.room. This means the first number or letter identifies the floor, the second identifies the flat and the final number or letter identifies the room within the flat.

Some halls use a block identifier at the beginning of the room number, making the format slightly different. To help explain these variations, all halls of residence are listed below in alphabetical order, together with their blocks (where applicable) and a breakdown of how theor room numbers are structured.
