

Social Justice Photography Competition Runner Up 2018

Sunshine in Palestine

Alex Abetiba, Arts, Languages and Cultures

It's easy to forget that life around the world doesn't all tick in accordance with Britain's. This is especially true in the recent persistent rain that has forced people indoors and into their heads. This photo – taken last summer in a Palestinian skatepark – should remind us of two things. First, that children bear no responsibility for the political landscapes in which they are born and grow up. Children have a universal love of play that should be encouraged and remembered amongst the barrage of negative headlines that pass over our desensitised ears. Secondly, that the sun is always shining somewhere.

www.egc.manchester.ac.uk/socialjustice/photocomp/