

Succession Planning – Preparing your board for the future.

Who will be your board's next chair?

Judith Hicks

Head of Inspiring Governance

Programme

1. Principles of Succession Planning
2. Modelling – what does good chairing look like?
3. Culture of Succession
4. Barriers to Chairing
5. The Succession Cycle
6. Developing Governors
7. Succession Timeline

Preparing your board for the future

inspiring governance

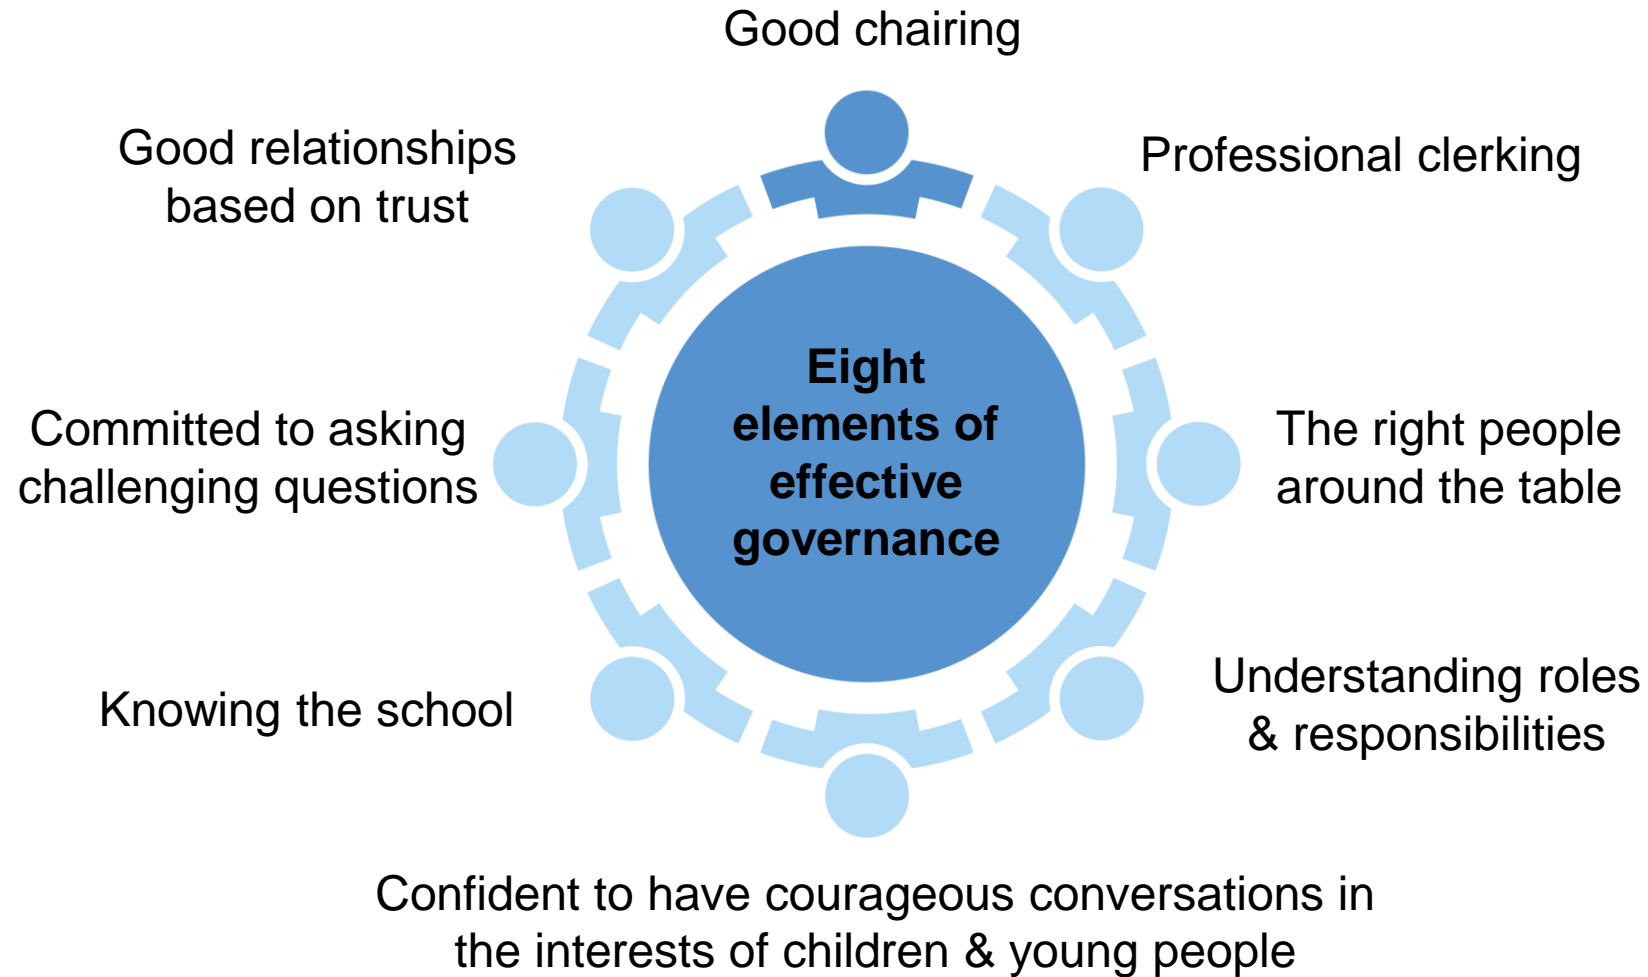

Principles of Succession – getting the basics in place

- What is succession planning?
- Why plan for chair succession?
- The regulatory bit!
- The role of the chair

Eight Elements of Effective Governance

Modelling – what does good chairing look like?

Table Discussion

Discuss on your tables what positive indicators demonstrate that effective chairing is in place and identify the 3 most important.

Establishing a culture of succession

1 Reality

- time
- support
- professionalism
- understanding the role
- leadership
- feeling valued

2 Building the team

- self evaluate
- building trust
- horizon scanning
- get to know each other
- team build
- confidence building

3 A culture of succession

- time for discussion
- long lead in time
- offer opportunities that are not too daunting
- role model

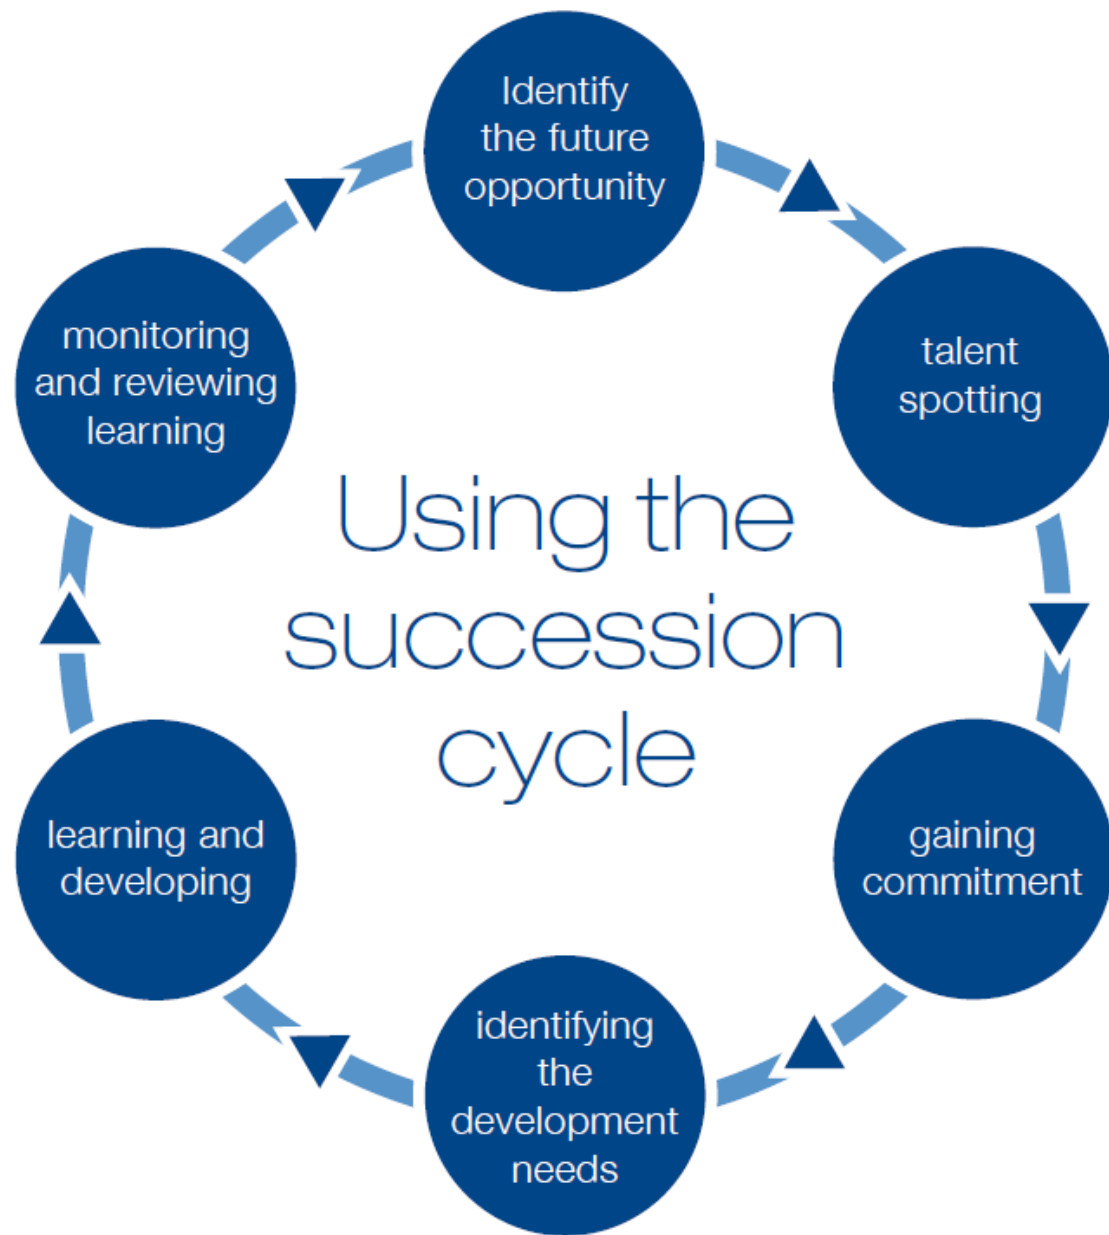

Barriers to chair succession

Table Discussion

Discuss on your tables what factors deter existing governors from putting themselves forward as chair-elect, and identify the most influential to feedback to the whole group.

The Succession Cycle

Developing Governors

future
chairs

The succession solution for school boards

inspiring
governance

The school governance recruitment and support service

n|g|a| learninglink

n|g|a| leading
governance

Development for
Chairs, Clerks & Boards

Funded by

Department for Education

YOUNG GOVERNORS' NETWORK

Supported by n|g|a | National
Governance
Association

Succession Timeline – a scenario-based table exercise

In September 2020 your board's current chair will have served 6 years in post and she has stated that she does not wish to exceed NGA's best practice guidance for time in post. This has recently been discussed at the spring term board meeting without a clear way forward being determined, as no existing governors expressed an interest in becoming the next chair. This matter will be an agenda item at the summer term board meeting, but there are not high hopes that a governor will change their mind.

Devise a schedule to recruit, induct and train a new governor to be ready to be elected chair of governors in September 2020, including a period of transition with the current chair.

Summary

1. Principles of Succession Planning
2. Modelling – what does good chairing look like?
3. Culture of Succession
4. Barriers to Chairing
5. The Succession Cycle
6. Developing Governors
7. Succession Timeline

One of the things we often miss in succession planning is that it should be gradual and thoughtful, with lots of sharing of information and knowledge and perspective, so that it's almost a non-event when it happens.

Anne M. Mulcahy

Thank you for participating, enjoy the remainder of your conference judith.hicks@nga.org.uk

