

The Dean's Prize Fellowships

There are many reasons why our campus is an ideal place to make your name in ground-breaking research and investigation. The University of Manchester is the UK's largest campus-based university.

With four faculties, 25 academic schools and over 11,000 staff, we offer more than 400 degree courses. In addition we support hundreds of specialist research groups, and have the biggest student community in the UK. As well as the advantages of our size, scope and reputation, we are pleased to offer the following opportunity to make your mark.

This distinguished award is part of our programme focussed on research culture and offers pump-prime funding to promote the careers of aspiring academic researchers by bridging that difficult career gap between excellent postdoctoral researcher and research independence. We are offering salary plus support costs for two years. Applications for an external fellowship will be expected by the end of the 1st year, or early in the 2nd year. Fellows will be expected to secure substantial funding for their research and complete research outputs of international excellence. It is likely that successful candidates will have clear intellectual links to current faculty members in order to benefit from appropriate mentorship, advice and support.

The award is available for both clinical and pure science applicants as a stepping stone to an intermediate or senior level fellowship. All applicants should already hold a PhD. While flexible, in broad terms, we anticipate pure science applicants will have 3-7 years of postdoctoral experience. Hospital-based medical applicants will be about to complete or have just completed clinical specialist training or similar.
