The Guardian (Manchester Guardian) Archive

Dates of Creation: 1821-1986

Administrative history

The Manchester Guardian was founded by John Edward Taylor (1791-1844) in 1821, two years after the Peterloo Massacre. Taylor was a successful Manchester cotton merchant, who wanted a newspaper to promote political reform. He was supported in this venture by a number of Manchester commercial men, who shared Taylor's moderate liberal opinions. Originally a weekly, the first issue of the paper appeared on 5 May 1821, and included international and national as well as local news. By the 1830s the Manchester Guardian had become the best-selling newspaper in Manchester; in 1836 it was published twice-weekly, and in 1855 it became a daily.

The Manchester Guardian was a strongly dynastic paper, being in the hands of the Taylor and Scott families continuously until the mid-twentieth century. The two families had been connected since Taylor's marriage to Sophia Scott in 1817. In 1844, after Taylor's death, his brother-in-law, Russell Scott took over the running of the paper until Taylor's sons, Russell Scott Taylor and Edward Taylor came of age. Russell Scott was the father of the Charles Prestwich Scott (1846-1932), probably the most significant figure in the history of the newspaper. It was C.P. Scott, appointed editor in 1872, who transformed the paper from an essentially provincial journal into a newspaper of national and international standing. Scott pioneered a style of journalism that was both accessible and highly principled. Politically, he pursued a consistently left-of-centre editorial stance during his fifty-seven years in the post, even in the face of public hostility. He championed Irish Home Rule, condemned the excesses of imperialism, and criticised British policy in South Africa immediately before and during the Boer War. Scott's journalistic achievement was, in the words of Lord Robert Cecil, "making righteousness readable".

Scott recruited a gifted set of journalists to the paper, mostly directly from Oxbridge, including C. E. Montague, L. T. Hobhouse, W. T. Arnold, and Allan Monkhouse. They made major contributions to the paper's reputation for its coverage of national affairs, particularly politics and the arts. In 1904, Scott bought the Manchester Guardian from the Taylor family at an inflated price, and thereafter ran it as owner-editor. Following Scott's retirement in 1929, his son, Edward, was appointed as editor. He died suddenly following a boating accident in April 1932, and was succeeded by W. P. Crozier. In 1936 ownership of the paper was transferred to the Scott Trust in order to protect the paper's journalistic independence. A P Wadsworth took over as editor in 1944, and in turn was succeeded by H. A. Hetherington in 1956, who remained in post until 1975. The Manchester Guardian's liberal outlook continued under these editors, although formal support for the Liberal party gradually waned. On 24 August 1959 the title of the newspaper changed to the Guardian to reflect its national distribution and news coverage, and in 1970 the main editorial offices and production facilities moved to London.

The newspaper and its archive are a major source for studies of the political, military, economic, social and technological developments of the 20th century.

Immediate Source of acquisition

The bulk of the archive was donated to JRUL by the Guardian in 1971; there have been several subsequent accessions.

Accruals

This is a non-accruing archive.

Scope and content

The archive consists of two main elements: the records of the newspaper as a business; and a very extensive collection of editorial correspondence and despatches from reporters. Records date from the foundation of the paper in 1821 and continue until the editorship of Hetherington into the mid-1970s.

The archive is strongest for the period from the 1890s to the 1960s. Comparatively few records from the pre-C.P. Scott era have survived.

There is a particularly fine set of records relating to the Guardian as a business concern; this includes partnership contracts and legal documents relating to the foundation and subsequent ownership of the paper, including the original agreement between John Taylor senior, and a group of Manchester merchants and gentlemen for the financing of the launch of the paper in 1821, as well as leases of properties (1887-1960s), and papers relating to libel actions. Financial records include ledger books for the period 1821-1823, 1828-1834, 1839-1900, and cash books for 1827-1828, 1830-1832, 1838-1841 and 1845-1848. There is also a wide range of more recent financial records including balance sheets and financial correspondence. There are circulation and distribution records, including detailed sets of statistics, and files relating to circulation figures. There is an important body of records relating to the production of the newspaper, containing information on developments in printing technology, changes of premises, working conditions, wage rates and trade union employment agreements. Payment books detail the employment conditions of machinists, electricians, cleaners, cooks, and other ancillary workers. There are a number of photographs depicting staff, working premises and equipment (GDN/317) although photographs produced for publication in the newspaper are not part of this archive.

The general series also includes material on the Guardian's Manchester headquarters in Cross Street and later, Deansgate. Records exist for the activities of journalistic staff, including payment records, reporters' diaries (these are appointments diaries and contain no reportage etc.) and listings of books reviewed. The payment ledgers which record payments to contributors (GDN 229-235, 338/1-12a) are a useful means of identifying authorship of articles (which were normally published anonymously).

The archive includes a number of records relating to the Guardian's sister paper, the Manchester Evening News.

The correspondence and despatches are a source of immense importance for studies of almost every aspect of the late 19th and 20th centuries. The period of Scott's editorship (1872-1929) is represented by two classes of correspondence. There are nearly 4,400 personal letters to and from Scott, exchanged with some 1,100 individuals (GDN 118-132, 334-338). The general correspondence includes separate series for J.E. Taylor (GDN 129-130), G.B. Dibblee, a manager at the Manchester Guardian (GDN 131) and the academic and journalist, L.T. Hobhouse (GDN 132). The second class comprises editorial correspondence, numbering 13,000 items from over 1,300 persons (the so-called "A" series). Scott's correspondence reveals his close personal and political contacts with many of the leading statesmen and politicians of his time, such as Herbert Asquith, David Lloyd George, Winston Churchill, Lord Haldane, Lord Grey of Fallodon, Ramsay MacDonald, Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Beveridge, Sir Samuel Hoare and Leslie Hore-Belisha. His interest in causes such as women's suffrage, Irish nationalism and the establishment of a Jewish homeland is illuminated in correspondence with the suffragette Emmeline Pankhurst, the subsequent Irish rebel Sir Roger Casement, and the Zionists Chaim Weizmann and Sir Lewis Namier. Leading literary figures also feature in the correspondence, such as George Bernard Shaw, William Butler Yeats, John Masefield and Arthur Ransome.

Reactions to Scott's stance on the Boer War can be traced in an interesting collection of correspondence (GDN 324/7). There is also a small group of letters from Lord Fisher of Kilverstone to Scott and Sir Maurice Hankey (GDN 223/54). The archive includes a collection of Scott's leading articles and other journalistic writings (GDN 75-78a). There are also typescript copies of Scott's political diaries covering 1911-1928 (GDN 133-134) [published as The political diaries of C.P. Scott 1911-1928, ed. by Trevor Wilson (London: Collins 1970)].

In the post-Scott era, the correspondence of W.P. Crozier (1932-1944) is particularly rich in material relating to European politics, Zionism and the Second World War. Most of this material can be found in the "B" series of editorial correspondence, but there is also very significant material in the so-called "foreign correspondence" series covering the years 1912-1939 (GDN 204-221). In addition, a series of Crozier's "confidential" correspondence and papers relating to Palestine and Zionism contains much of value on these topics (GDN 145/30-44).

There are also discrete series of correspondence of the former Guardian correspondent and Labour politician, Morgan Philips Price (GDN 338/2), and another former journalist and foreign policy scholar, David Mitrany (GDN 338/1). Correspondence of the paper's London editor, James Bone, forms a separate series (GDN 222), and this includes letters from the novelist, Arnold Bennett.

The editorial correspondence of Alfred Powell Wadsworth (1944-56) can be found in the "B" series, and there is some additional correspondence in GDN 149. The "C" series comprises the correspondence and other papers of Wadsworth's successor, Alastair Hetherington (1956-75). Labour politicians figure prominently in both series, and include George Brown, James Callaghan, Richard Crossman, Hugh Gaitskell, Roy Jenkins and Harold Wilson, while Jo Grimond represents the Liberals. Hetherington's papers include a collection of very interesting interview transcripts from these and other politicians dating mainly from the 1960s. Among the prominent Guardian staff members and contributors who feature in the correspondence are Mark Arnold-Forster, Denis Brogan, Neville Cardus, Alistair Cooke, R.H. Fry, Bernard Levin, Malcolm Muggeridge, Peter Preston, Terence Prittie, Arthur Ransome, Brian Redhead, R.H. Tawney, A.J.P. Taylor and Alexander Werth.

The "D" Series comprises the papers of the Guardian's Deputy Editor, Patrick Monkhouse, dating from the 1950s-1960s. Monkhouse was the son of the distinguished Guardian journalist, Allan Monkhouse. A number of significant journalists are represented in these papers, and in terms of subject matter there is some interesting material relating to economic planning in the North West, and the development of the Peak District National Park, a particular interest of Monkhouse.

Almost every major event and crisis of the 20th century is represented in the archive: the First World War, the Russian Revolution, the Abdication Crisis of 1936, the rise of Fascism and the Second World War, the founding of Israel and the later Middle East conflicts, the Suez Crisis, the Korean and Vietnam Wars, the Cold War, the development of the European Economic Community etc.

System of Arrangement

The constituent records of the archive have been arranged in a sequential running order (GDN 1-449). It appears that the arrangement was imposed on the collection some time before its transfer to JRUL, and as such is more in the nature of an accession list than a proper archival arrangement. Although some record series with similar content are contiguously arranged within this system, the records have not for the most part been arranged systematically by provenance, function or activity.

Some material however has been reclassified, namely the Scott and Crozier/Wadsworth editorial correspondence (Series "A" and "B" respectively). Similar archival material which did not form part of the original accession, namely the Hetherington papers ("C" series) and the Monkhouse papers ("D" series) has been classified in a like manner.

An index of contents for the Scott general correspondence (GDN 118-132, 135 and 332-336) has been created, arranged by correspondent with a brief description of the content of items. This follows after the main Guardian hand list. A similar listing has been provided (without content description) for the Wadsworth additional correspondence (GDN/149).

The catalogue has been divided into two sections:

Part 1

Business Archive	GDN/1-449
Index of Scott General Correspondence	GDN/118-132, 135 and 332-336

Guardian Archives for the post-Hetherington period are the responsibility of the GNM Archive, Kings Place, 90 York Way, London N1 9GU, email: archives@guardian.co.uk. This archive also has numerous collections of papers of Guardian journalists and staff. See their web-site for further information (<http://www.guardian.co.uk/gnm-archive>).

JRUL also holds the papers of a number of individuals employed or associated with the Guardian. These include: W.E.A. Axon, journalist; W.P. Crozier, editor, 1932-44; A.N. Monkhouse, critic; C.E. Montague, journalist; Howard Spring, journalist; and A.P. Wadsworth, editor, 1944-56.

Bibliography

The Guardian archive was used extensively by David Ayerst in his official history, Guardian: Biography of a Newspaper (London: Collins 1971). This is the standard study of the newspaper up to 1956. For the later period, which is partly covered by this archive, see Geoffrey Taylor, Changing faces: a history of the Guardian 1956-1988 (London: Fourth Estate 1993).

The archive has been described in Peter McNiven, 'The Guardian Archives in the John Rylands University Library of Manchester', Bulletin of the John Rylands University Library of Manchester, vol. 74 (1992), pp. 65-84.

Index to Scott General Correspondence	pp.58-172
Index to Wadsworth Addl Correspondence (GDN149)	pp. 173-182

Guardian Archive Main Sequence – Business Records

Introduction.

The finding aid is based on a list of archive material compiled in January 1971 after the records were removed from the newspaper's Cross Street Building, Manchester.

This list is essentially an accession list, using reference numbers allotted by Guardian staff. Record series are described in no particular order. The records include some material relating to the Manchester Evening News. Some constituents of archive have been reclassified (editorial correspondence) and are not described in this list.

1-73 Reporters' Diaries, 1 Jan-31 Dec 1944.

The diaries are appointment diaries of Manchester Guardian and Manchester Evening News reporters. Many of the diaries are 'Letts' diaries. Information is arranged by date (daily), column inches, place and subject of news, and initials (of the reporter). Some diaries have an A-Z index in the front with particulars of the reporter and sometimes an address for that person. Some diaries contain staff rosters, newspaper cuttings and notes. After 1942 the information is entered into note books rather than actual diaries.

Condition: a number of items are damaged with broken spines and loose covers.

1-17 Guardian Reporters' Diaries, 1 Jan 1868-31 Dec 1882. An incomplete run of diaries.

118 - 132 [and 135 and 332-6]: CORRESPONDENCE OF C. P. SCOTT, c.1870-1930.

These series comprise Scott's general correspondence with public figures, and is additional to Series A correspondence, which is mainly correspondence with MG journalists and contributors. The reference numbers were allocated to this material before it was transferred to the Library, and the correspondence is arranged chronologically. The material consists of letters to and from Scott, and comprises over 5000 items of correspondence.

A card index was created for this material, giving name of correspondent, date, a brief description of subject matter and the reference number. This has been translated into a list of correspondents, arranged alphabetically, with the relevant reference codes.

See the section on C.P. Scott's General Correspondence for a basic index of content.

Some correspondents in these series also appear in the Scott's Editorial Correspondence (Series A).

- 118/1-134 C. P. Scott's general correspondence 1870-89

- 145/14/1-52 Miscellaneous documents, etc. mainly relating; to the editorship of W. P. Crozier, 1932-47.
- 145/30-44 W. P. Crozier's confidential correspondence and related documents relating to foreign affairs, and mainly Palestine [Jan 1935]-30 Jun 1944.

This series is particularly (but not exclusively) focused on the question of Palestine, Jewish refugees, Zionism, the Palestinian Arab perspective and the post war settlement of the Middle East.

Papers include: the reports of government ministers such as Lord Moyne and Lord Robert Cecil and government papers such as the Palestine Statement of Policy (1939) and discussions around the Balfour Declaration (1917), and commissions such as the Palestine Partition Commissions (1937 & 1938); letters and other documents from groups and agencies such as The Jewish Agency for Palestine, the Zionist Organisation, and so on; There are reports such as the [Walter Clay] Lowdermilk ““TVA” Reclamation Project for the Jordan Valley”; and documentation of the Arab Revolt in Palestine (1936-39). Other papers describe the establishment of a Palestinian Home Guard and recruiting Jewish soldiers for the British army.

Many dispatches are marked as confidential or secret. Some are in Hebrew or have been translated from Hebrew. These include personal interviews and accounts, for example describing the passage of refugee ships such as the Darien [II], the sinking of the SS Patria and the MV Struma; and information about internment camps in Palestine and Turkey. Lewis Bernstein Namier [L.B.N.], and to a lesser extent Chaim Weizmann and Moshe Shertok [Sharret], are prominent figures. There is also material describing the Palestinian Arab perspective. There are Crozier’s private notes, as well as press cuttings relating to Palestine and the Jewish refugee question. There are pamphlets such as Near & Middle East published by the Union of Democratic Control, Communal Settlements in Palestine [with photographs] by the Jewish National Fund and Jews, Arabs and the Middle East by the Jewish Agency for Palestine; as well pages from magazines such as the Zionist Review.

Related material can be found elsewhere in the archive, notably papers re. Lewis Bernstein Namier, GDN 149/N1/1 and Chaim Weizmann, GDN 334/98-334/15, and also the Crozier Foreign Correspondence series GDN 204-221(1912-39).

Other dispatches refer to further aspects of foreign affairs in relation to World War II. Many documents are marked as 'confidential' or 'secret'. Some are in German or French. Dispatches include: details of various military plans and offensives (sometimes related to the Palestine material, such as anti-Jewish pogroms in Turkey and Iraq) and the effects of war on the civilian populations; reports of government ministers, such as Anthony Eden, Ernest Bevin, Lord Beaverbrook and Winston Churchill; interviews with various political commentators; notes and reports mainly from foreign correspondents [Charles] Lambert and [Eric L.] Wigham; also from [Max] Wolf, [Frederick] Voigt, [Marcel] Fodor and [Alexander] Werth regarding Russia, America, the Far East, Europe and the 'Mediterranean and Middle East Theatre'.

Domestic news predominantly features Home Front affairs – home security, air raid casualties (statistics and accounts), food and fuel shortages, rationing, refugees, evacuees and so forth. The folders are as follows:

153             Rolled scroll presented to A. P. Wadsworth by the city of New York, 16 September 1949.

154-203.        These numbers are now discontinued. They represented three major collections of correspondence and related documents which are listed in Part 2 of the Guardian catalogue. They are as follows:

a) The P. J. Monkhouse correspondence. This contains material dating from about the end of A. P. Wadsworth's editorship (1956) to c. 1970. See the “D” Series

b) The “A” series of General Correspondence. This is a collection of correspondence dating almost entirely from the years of the editorship of C. P. Scott, 1872-1929.

c) The 'B' sequence of General Correspondence. This collection dates almost entirely from the years of the editorships of W. P. Crozier (1932-44) and A. P. Wadsworth (1944-56).

A few items in the latter two collections fall outside the dates given above, and a few individual correspondents appear on both lists. The list for the 'A' sequence records about 13,000 letters from over 1,300 correspondents, and that for the 'B' sequence about 45,000 letters from over 6,600 correspondents. See Part 2 of this catalogue for a description of this material.

204-221 Foreign correspondence 1912-39

This collection consists of letters and dispatches of Manchester Guardian European correspondents, mainly from 1933 to 1939, with a particular emphasis on Nazi Germany. The items have been arranged in single chronological sequence.

The Foreign Correspondence is in the process of being catalogued in detail, and more information about this will be available in due course. Currently the list only includes reference numbers and covering dates, as follows:

204/1-362	1912-29
205/1-273	1930-1
206/1-523	1932
207/1-270	January-April 1933

A. P. WADSWORTH EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE

GDN/149

This collection of correspondence was described by the Manchester Guardian as "A. P. Wadsworth's correspondence" Wadsworth was editor of the newspaper from 1944 to 1956, but some of the letters date from well before that period. This list should be used to supplement the other lists of Manchester Guardian correspondence, especially the Crozier/Wadsworth Editorial Correspondence ("B" series) covering 1932-56.
