

Styles of Mentoring Quick Links

WHAT MAKES A GOOD MENTOR?

Use the link below to reflect on 10 key elements that make a good mentor.

Click here

THE 3 C'S

A successful relationship between a mentor and mentee is crucial for the professional development of an individual.

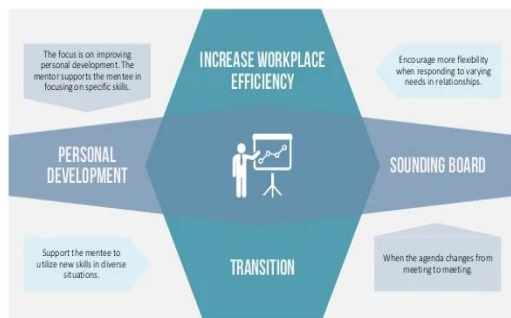

The 3 C's of mentorship are:

- Clarity
- Communication
- Commitment

It is important that enough time is given to ensuring that team teaching, peer observation and reflective discussion happens on a regular basis.

MENTORING STYLES

Various Executive Mentoring Styles

PRESENTATIONLOAD

CURRENT RESEARCH?

CollectiveEd the Centre for Mentoring, Coaching and Professional Learning pulls together a range of research and evidence which is published. The link below focuses on mentoring on pages 22-25

CollectiveEd Issue 13

5 TOP TIPS

Use the link below to explore 5 ways to develop your mentor skills and reflect on what a mentor is.

Click here

RESEARCH

Styles of Mentoring

When you choose to be a mentor, you will be acting as an advisor to a less experienced colleague and as a trainee teacher mentor, you are helping the trainee to develop their professionalism. This is achieved through you offering advice, modelling how to use techniques/strategies, providing feedback and allowing the trainee space to practise. As a mentor, you will need to develop your approach and develop your own style. Click here to read more about different styles of mentoring.

Below are some links to short videos or articles/blogs that explore key aspects of what mentors are and the impact mentoring can have.

How to be a great mentor-Kenneth Ortiz TED Talk

7 tips for being a mentor

How to be a mentor blog

National Framework for coaching and mentoring

An introduction to coaching and mentoring

Student teacher mentoring tips

MANCHESTER
1824

The University of Manchester