

Discover MA Educational Leadership in Practice at The University of Manchester

Delivered by the Manchester Institute of Education, our MA in Educational Leadership in Practice brings together experts in their field to deliver an unparalleled blended course. Complete with biannual conferences, students of this course will have the opportunity to network and learn face-to-face, complementing the flexible, online delivery.

This course will build your intellectual and practical confidence in all interactions, with teachers, parents, students, managers, board members and policymakers, empowering you to engage and influence change at a higher level.

Are you ready to be the positive change your educational organisation needs?

Education is an ever-changing field. With rising trends in internationalisation and changing standards, it's important to stay informed and on top of developments. Our master's in Educational Leadership in Practice is designed with these in mind.

Dr Paul Armstrong
Senior Lecturer in Educational Leadership

“
The Educational Leadership in Practice course provides current and aspiring educational leaders with the opportunity to step outside your practice bubble and reflect on your professional roles through a range of different lenses.

In this way, the course is suitable for leaders or aspiring leaders, who wish to develop and grow their network of global education practitioners.

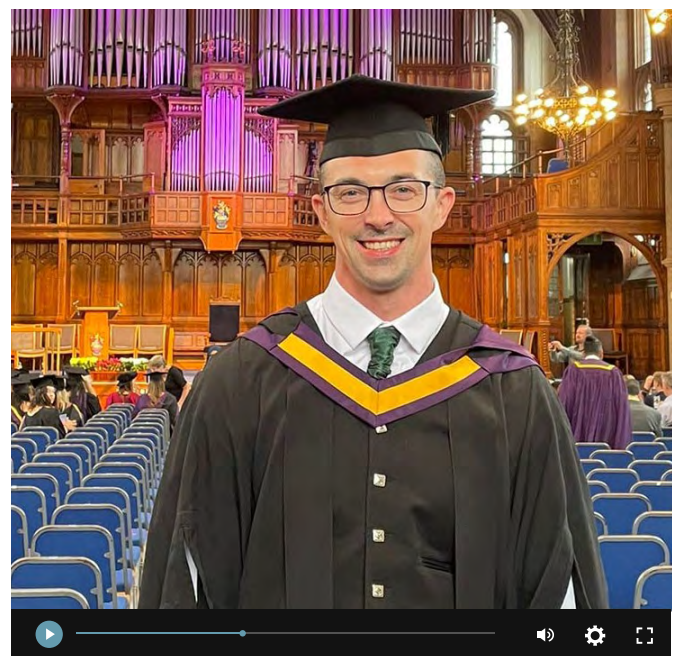

”

Download our brochure

Hear from Martin, Educational Leadership in Practice graduate

Martin Lipton is a graduate of our MA Educational Leadership in Practice in 2022. A deputy head of a high school based in Berlin, Scotland native Martin completed his course in 2022. Find out what he thought about his course and how it helped his career.

“It is time we recognise teachers are professionals, not workers”

Dr Alex Gardner-McTaggart is a Senior Lecturer in educational leadership at The University of Manchester. In this article with Independent Education Today, he talks about the importance of changing the role of teachers and placing them at the forefront of transforming education.

Read the full article here

What are the digital skills school leaders really need?

The Educational Leadership in Practice course has a strong focus on digital skills to help transform education. In this podcast with Times Education Global Jake Harrison, biology teacher and current Educational Leadership in Practice student speaks about the digitisation of education.

Listen on Spotify

Listen to our other podcasts

Are you ready to be a school leader?

Rethinking Educational Change

Don't press pause on leadership development

Read the full article here

Over the past couple of years, there have been significant changes to the way people work and live. In this article first published in TES, Dr Alex Gardner-McTaggart and Dr Paul Armstrong, Course Director, talk about how the pandemic has empowered teachers to think strategically about their teaching practice.