INTERVIEW

Hannah studied both her undergraduate and postgraduate degrees at The University of Manchester. She talks to us about why she chose Manchester, her time at the University and how her studies have impacted her career.

Hi Hannah! Tell us a bit about why you chose to study the MRes in Criminology?

I chose to stay at The University of Manchester for my Masters because the modules offered matched areas that I was interested in and I had enjoyed my undergraduate degree so much, I was not ready to leave.

I chose the MRes instead of the MA because I had realised that research was a strength of mine and felt that the MRes could take me further in my career.

What most stands out from your time at The University of Manchester?

What stands out for me is the range of possibilities and experiences you can have. During my years in Manchester I have been fortunate to be involved with the Youth Offending Team, Victim Support and MASH (Manchester Action for Street Health). This really brought my lectures to reality and really helped me to improve my academic writing because I truly understood the topic.

What do you feel is unique or distinctive about studying at The University of Manchester?

I think the range of expert teaching available. The lecturers are leading academics which not only means they are enthusiastic about their work, but you know you are really learning from the best. They provide you with support and for me, they really pushed me to achieve higher.

When I talk to people from other universities they are shocked when I say that we have learnt how to code in a programme called R and that for my dissertation I am analysing tweets. This just shows that Manchester really offers a wide range of topics and really puts you ahead of others.

What advice would you give to those considering studying at Manchester?

Use the help available to you. I remember so often people were struggling with a module or an assessment but didn't go to the lecturer. Their doors are always open and getting their advice really helped me to advance in my degree.

Also take advantage of the opportunities around you, apply for volunteering in different areas of the Criminal Justice System; this gives you an insight into not only what career may suit you but will really help you with your studies and applying for jobs.

The lecturers are leading academics which not only means they are enthusiastic about their work, but you know you are really learning from the best.
