MSC INTERNATIONAL DISASTER MANAGEMENT

GRADUATE PROFILE

NAME: Anna Fraine
COURSE: MA Humanitarianism and Conflict Response
YEAR OF GRADUATION: 2019

ROLE: Campaigns Officer
EMPLOYER: Catholic International Development Charity (CAFOD)

INTERVIEW

Hi Anna! Tell us a bit about what inspired you to study this course.

I saw the MA as the perfect opportunity to reflect on my long-term volunteering placement in Eswatini (formerly Swaziland) and gain a greater appreciation and understanding of the humanitarian sector, its historical and contemporary state.

And what did you enjoy most about studying at the HCRI?

I appreciated the reflective and interdisciplinary focus that the Institute adopts. I also felt well supported throughout the programme and able to undertake additional activities that gave me valuable experiences outside of the class, such as the SIMEX Emergency Response Simulation, the Young People in Humanitarianism Conference and a research visit to Uganda.

What have you been up to since you graduated?

I began working as a Research Assistant for the Catholic Bishops' Conference of England & Wales in the Department for Social Justice. My role involved research and policy work across various social justice issues - where the practice from writing policy briefs in the Humanitarian Protection module certainly came in handy!

I have since been Interim Trust Manager for a charitable trust and have recently taken up post at the Catholic International Development Charity (CAFOD) as the Campaigns Officer.

Outside of work I am a Trustee for a youth social action charity, Million Minutes, and I am regularly engaged in public speaking events, particularly around climate action.

How have the skills and knowledge gained on the course helped you in your current role/career progression?

The emphasis on understanding the complexities, history and contemporary debates in humanitarianism has expanded my awareness of the intersecting crises that will ultimately affect the future trajectory of our societies.

Studying at the HCRI gave me opportunities to put into practice translating complex theories and concepts into accessible materials and presentations for a range of diverse audiences. This has enabled me to get into work on campaigning as I now have the knowledge and skills to raise awareness, engage different audiences and encourage participation in activist movements and lobbying government.

What advice would you give to anyone following in your footsteps?

Working for peace is essential, overseas as well as in our own communities. Be the voice of challenge when you feel it is required. Peacebuilding, community resilience, climate action and disaster preparedness are going to be vital areas of work across the UK and beyond in the coming months and years. The dissertation is a great opportunity to explore humanitarian issues in your own local area.

I now have the knowledge and skills to raise awareness, engage different audiences and encourage participation in activist movements and lobbying government.
