

Are you a member of the African or Caribbean community who has been affected by psychosis?

Are you passionate about improving mental health services, promoting equality and diversity, and engaging African and Caribbean communities in mental health services and research?

Yes? Join the CaFI Team!

The Culturally-adapted Family Intervention (CaFI) Study is testing culturally-sensitive Family Intervention for African and Caribbean people with experience of psychosis and those close to them.

We are recruiting 'experts by experience' across England to our Research Advisory Group (RAG)!

We're looking for service users, carers, friends, family and community members to share their experiences of living with psychosis.

Responsibilities and Activities of RAG Members include:

- Promoting CaFI
- Engaging communities and organisations
- Advising our team
- Supporting communication of findings

RAG members will meet twice yearly via video call or in person and complete occasional ad-hoc tasks as needed.

Members will receive payment, expenses and opportunities to develop skills, training and experience.
