

A week in the life of our English Literature student, Jacob

Hi! I'm Jacob, a final year English Literature student. My literary interests are fairly eclectic, ranging between Shakespeare, the Romantics, and Modernism. One great aspect of the course is that it encourages the choice of a wide-range of modules. Courses are led by academics who specialise in the area, especially in third-year, where lecturers teach one area of often quite niche study that particularly interests them (see, for example, Romantic Venice). Manchester is a great city to study in. I was drawn to it coming from a small city with much less to do; it has not disappointed in that respect. I'm also one of the Managing Editors at The Mancunion, the University's student newspaper. It takes up a lot of my time, but I love it (and it's not just work, but also frequent socials).

Formal study hours

Informal study hours

Student society

Part-time work

Social activities

Monday	11:30-1330 Reading for Romantic Venice	14:30-15:30 Reading for Culture and Conflict	16:00-16:15 Meeting with Editor-in-Chief of The Mancunion	17:15-18:00 Section Meetings at the Mancunion	18:15-21:00 Orchestra
Tuesday	10:00-11:00 Culture and Conflict Lecture	11:30-12:30 Finish writing a News piece for The Mancunion	13:00-15:45 Complete reading before Romantic Venice lecture		16:00-17:00 Romantic Venice Lecture	Evening Finish Reading for Gendered Experiments Lecture
Wednesday	09:00-10:00 Gendered Experiments Lecture	11:30-12:30 Seminar Prep for Thursday	13:00-14:00 Sub-editing meeting for The Mancunion	14:00-15:00 Gendered Experiments Screening	15:15-17:45 Orchestra	Evening Go for a run with my housemate
Thursday	09:00-11:00 Culture and Conflict Seminar	11:00-13:00 Gendered Experiments Seminar	13:30-14:30 Editing for The Mancunion	15:00-16:00 Managing Editors Meeting	Evening Go to a House Party
Friday	13:00-15:00 Romantic Venice Seminar	15:00-16:00 Meeting for potential Mancunion investigation	18:40-19:30 5-a-side football at The Armitage		Evening Go to the pub with friends from football
Saturday	11:00-12:00 Practice orchestra pieces	14:00-17:30 Reading for next week		Evening Watch TV with my house
Sunday	14:00-17:00 Shift at work			Evening Go out for a meal in the city centre		Evening Reading for next week