

A week in the life of our English Literature and French student, Izzy

Hi, I'm Izzy – I'm currently in my fourth year studying English Literature and French at the University of Manchester. English Literature and French is a great subject combination. I enjoy the books and discussions in my English modules, we look at films, books, and poetry related to all sorts of literary and political movements from all over the world and I particularly enjoy discussing all sorts of ideas in the seminars. On the French side of my course, we take 3+ hours language a week as well as modules in francophone literature, film, art, politics, and Music. Last year I was in Lyon, France for my year abroad where I studied at a French university which not only massively improved my French but gave me so many memories and friendships. I love Manchester as a city, it is full of cool art exhibitions, pubs, and live music gigs. It is a big city, but the student community is everywhere, so I have never felt lost or overwhelmed.

- Formal study hours
- Informal study hours
- Student society
- Part-time work
- Social activities

Monday	12pm-3pm Study in the library		3pm-4pm Seminar: French Language – Oral		Evening Climbing Society event
Tuesday	10am-12pm Lecture: Protest music in France	12pm-1pm Lunch with my coursemates on campus	1pm-2pm Lecture: Culture and Politics in the Contemporary British novel		2pm-4pm Study in the library	Working a shift at my part-time bar job
Wednesday	11am-12pm Seminar: Protest music in France		12pm-4pm Study in the library			Evening Climbing Society social
Thursday	12pm-3pm Study in the library		3pm-6pm Seminar: Creative Writing Poetry		Evening Cook dinner and watch a film with housemates
Friday	10am-12pm Seminar: Culture and Politics in the Contemporary British Novel		12pm-2pm Study in the library	2pm-4pm Seminar: French Language – Written		Evening Pub with my friends
Saturday	Working a shift at my part-time bar job
Sunday	2pm-4pm Sunday Lunch with friends			5pm-9pm Film Night at a friend's house		