

ALICE

A WEEK IN THE LIFE: BA LINGUISTICS AND SPANISH

"I'm Alice, and I'm studying Spanish and Linguistics. My degree is a joint honours, which means I get to study two different subject areas at the same time. In Spanish, I get to learn about the language and relevant culture and history, which is great for exploring a passion for languages. We also get the opportunity to spend the year in a Spanish-speaking country, which is an amazing chance at a more in-depth and personal experience of the culture and language. In Linguistics, the university offers a wide range of modules covering everything from typology to societal multilingualism, so that by the end of the degree we have specialised knowledge on the modules we choose! My favourite modules so far include a phonetics course (in Linguistics) and a Catalan course, which was a great opportunity to learn another language with my degree."
