

Call for Proposals / Speakers:

MCI Spring 2025 Research Talks

MCI hosts a variety of research and book talks about China, both in-person in Manchester and as online webinars with a global reach. Most events are free and open to the public.

The MCI team is putting together our public research talk series for Spring 2025. Our goal: advance research excellence in China studies across the faculty of Humanities.

For internal UoM faculty: do you have new research on China you would like to share to gain multidisciplinary feedback? Do you have a book out we can celebrate through a book release event?

For external speakers, we are most interested in hosting talks that will advance excellence in China studies research at UoM. That means bringing in world class China scholars to speak on topics of wide interest to our China studies staff and students, as well as scholars whose presence on campus might benefit current research on China at Manchester.

To Apply. Please submit the following information to mci@manchester.ac.uk with the subject line “Spring 2025 Research Talk Proposal” no later than Friday Nov. 29, 2024:

- Full Name
- Brief Bio (include academic title, institution, and profile picture)
- Talk Title (75 characters max; aim for clarity on your topic/research question)
- Abstract (200 words max)
- Availability throughout the Spring 2025 academic term

Limited travel funding may be available for scholars based outside Manchester.

Don't miss this opportunity to engage with a supportive community of China Studies scholars at Manchester—apply today to share your insights and contribute to the understanding of the ever-changing Chinese speaking world!