The Whitworth is proud to present Santiago Yahuarcani: The Beginning of Knowledge this first international solo exhibition dedicated to the artist and Indigenous leader of the Uitoto people. The exhibition presents around 30 paintings created from 2010 to the present day that showcase Yahuarcani's narrative-rich artistic practice, as part of this year's Manchester International Festival.

Working in Pebas, in a remote region of the Peruvian Amazon, Yahuarcani creates paintings using natural pigments on llanchama, a bark cloth derived from the ojé tree sourced from the forest. From origin myths and the depictions of the spirits and guardians of the rainforest to the sounds of the jungle and the images of colonial violence, his paintings capture the life and history of the Uitoto people past and present. Mundane details of trees, plants, animals and scenes found in everyday life are elevated as treasured memories in Yahuarcani's work, highlighting the importance of the preservation of Indigenous knowledge.

Organised thematically the exhibition presents new paintings as well as several loans from major international collections. After the premiere at the Whitworth, it will travel to the partner venues, Museu de Arte de São Paulo, Brazil and Museo Universitario del Chopo, Mexico City, Mexico.

Santiago Yahuarcani: The Beginning of Knowledge is presented as part of the 2025 Manchester International Festival and is curated by Professor Sook-Kyung Lee (Director, the Whitworth), Darren Pih (Head of Exhibitions & Collections, the Whitworth), Hannah Vollam (Assistant Curator, the Whitworth), Amanda Caniero (Curator, Museu de Arte de São Paulo) and Miguel A. López (Chief Curator, Museo Universitario del Chopo, Mexico City). The exhibition will be accompanied by a new publication containing texts by key scholars and curators.

Sook-Kyung Lee, Director, the Whitworth said: "We are delighted to present Santiago Yahuarcani's poignant yet powerful work as part of the 2025 Manchester International Festival. The artist brings intimate stories of Indigenous cultures of the Amazons to Manchester, highlighting our shared values. Supportive communities, intergenerational learning, and sustainable ecology are among the important pillars of Yahuarcani's life and art, which resonate beyond his environment."

Low Kee Hong, Creative Director, Factory International and Manchester International Festival, said: "This year's Manchester International Festival champions indigenous artists and creators from the Global South, to inspire fresh perspectives and invite us all to dream differently. We are so excited to present Santiago Yahuarcani's: The Beginning of Knowledge as part of the festival. From the climate catastrophe to colonial dispossession, we all have so much to learn from his works utilising the wisdom of the ancient Uitoto people."

About Santiago Yahuarcani

Santiago Yahuarcani (b. 1960, Pebas, Peru) is a self-taught artist and Indigenous leader of the Uitoto people. His mother, Martha López Pinedo, was a descendant of Gregorio López, the only member of the Aimeni clan (the white heron clan) who migrated from La Chorrera, today part of the Colombian Amazon, to the Ampiyacu River region, now the Peruvian Amazon, as part of the relocation of enslaved Indigenous populations to work in the rubber industry. His work addresses issues of the documentation of Indigenous knowledge, Amazonian ontologies, and the politics of genocide against their ancestors.

Yahuarcani's work was presented in Stranieri Ovunque – Foreigners Everywhere, as part of the Venice Biennale (2024), as well as the Toronto Biennial of Art (2024), the Mercosur Biennale (2025) and the Gwangju Biennale (2023). His works are held by KADIST, Museo de Arte de Lima, Museu de Arte de São Paulo, Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía, Tate, Museum of Modern Art, New York, Van Abbemuseum, and the Whitworth, The University of Manchester, and others.
