

Making waves: Queenie takes on the Dragon Boat Racing

One of our Estates & Facilities colleagues swapped campus life for the water earlier this month, taking part in a vibrant cultural event in Liverpool.

Queenie Tszching, part of our House Services team, joined the North West Confucius

Institutes' Dragon Boat Race on Sunday 17 May at Liverpool Watersports Centre. The event takes place every year, bringing together teams from universities across the region for a day of racing, teamwork, and celebration.

Dragon boat racing is a traditional activity with a history spanning more than 2,000 years, now celebrated around the world as both a competitive sport and a cultural festival.

Queenie shared that taking part in the event made her “happy all day long,” thanking the University for being able to take part, and reflecting on the energy and atmosphere for the day. It’s a brilliant example of how our colleagues contribute to and connect with wider communities beyond campus.

Alongside the photos, Queenie also shared an aerial video of the race, giving a real sense of the scale and teamwork involved as boats moved in sync across the water. It’s easy to see why the event is such a highlight for those taking part. Watch Queenie’s video by clicking the image below:
